The main centres of population within Northern Lincolnshire and Goole are Scunthorpe, Grimsby, Goole, Brigg, Immingham and Cleethorpe.

North Lincolnshire

North Lincolnshire combines rural charm with bustling picturesque market towns and villages. The region rolls towards the Humber estuary in the north, reaches to the Isle of Axholme in the west, and includes several lakes and rivers as it extends to the Lincolnshire wolds in the east.

The region boasts eight golf courses, including the new 27-hole course Forest Pines at Broughton, voted Best New Golf Course 1996. North Lincolnshire Council holds the Beacon Award for Education.

Scunthorpe

People conjure up images of blast furnaces and steel mills when they think of Scunthorpe but the modern town has much more to offer. Visitors to the town can expect to see markets, high street shopping facilities, restaurants, pubs, cafes, and a cinema.

The industrial island of Scunthorpe is surrounded by attractive rural landscape with small villages, quiet country lanes, footpaths and bridleways. Since the steelworks arrived 130 years ago the town has changed beyond all recognition and become more prosperous. Corus Steel is still the town's major employer, however Scunthorpe is a fast developing commercial base and now is the processing headquarters for Lloyd's Bank, with Canada's CCL Industries manufacturing for Europe from here, along with a range of other manufacturers.

Scunthorpe boasts a leisure centre with wave pool, four golf courses, outdoor sports centre Quibell Park and an indoor bowls centre. For nature lovers there is the Brumby Common Nature Reserve, or Ridge Walk for ramblers which leads through the limestone escarpment.
